

IMAGINING CELLS

If you were going to design a cell, what would it look like?

Maybe you could start with a minimal cell, like an amoeba, but what does that look like? How do you know? At what point can a combination of natural and synthetic components be considered a living cell? What parts do you need? How must they interact? Does your cell need to do something specific to be considered fully alive?